FRENCH PLAN GETS COOL RECEPTION

McCarthy

SENATOR McCarthy is in hospital with an injured hand, the victim of a vigorous handshake—an occupational hazard for politicians. But in McCarthy's case it provides a convenient excuse to dodge the mounting criticism from his fellow Senators who have at last risen to censure his sinister record of villainy, falsehoods, insults and innuendoes—enshrined appropriately in a doctrine known as McCarthyism. It is a name which many Americans and all true friends of America hope will die as suddenly as it emerged almost five years ago when an obscure Senator from the State of Wisconsin proclaimed to an audience in West Virginia that he had a list of 205 (later amended to 57) Communists employed by the State Department. In the succeeding years, McCarthy trod the trail to despotism as surely as any of his notorious contemporaries in history. There was a fanatical zeal, a ruthless determination, where the ultimate goal was obscured by monstrous and reckless defamations of innocent and guilty alike. He established himself as the arch-enemy of Communism but, in his perverted zeal, he came nearer to snuffing out the flame of democracy and liberty than any of his forbears in American history.

The indictment of Owen Lattimore on a charge of perjury ("a top Russian agent" was McCarthy's charge), the Harry Dexter White scandal, the dismissal of the State Department official, John Service and the slander heaped on men like Charles Bohlen (now U.S. Ambassador in Moscow), Ralph Zwicker ("not fit to wear the uniform of an Army General"), Robert Stevens, Secretary for the Army, Major Irving Peress (an Army dentist) right down to Annie Lee Moas (a Pentagon cafeteria custard cook) and even a Hongkong shipping company—these were just some of his stepping stones to fame—and eventual infamy.

ON Sunday, our former Ambassador to America, Sir Oliver Frank told a London audience McCarthy was one of the major causes of friction in Anglo-American relations. "It made it easier to lump the Soviet Union and the United States together as the two great threats to the peaceful progress of mankind." He added in the last few months signs had accumulated that McCarthy's star had crossed its zenith. Today McCarthy stands exposed to the world in his true colours. He has been shorn of most of his former powers. Following the recent Congressional elections he has lost the Chairmanship of two Senate Investigating Committees and he will be stripped of his power to conduct inquiries into suspected subversives in the Government and to subpoena reluctant witnesses to grueling examinations. His protege in Wisconsin was defeated in the Senatorial elections. Today he himself awaits censure proceedings before his colleagues... His star has surely crossed its zenith and is waning fast. And not too soon. The damage he has caused to his country's reputation abroad is extensive but not irreparable. The damage to his own party (largely due to the inability of the leaders to combat him effectively) is more disastrous and the damage to the cause of freedom and justice in the world is incalculable.

Little Enthusiasm In London For Big-4 Talks Proposal GUARDED COMMENT FROM U.S.

London, Nov. 22. The French Premier, M. Pierre Mendes-France's proposal for an East-West conference next May had a cool reception in diplomatic quarters tonight.

So too did the French Premier's idea of agreement with Russia on the evacuation of occupation troops from Austria 18 months to 2 years after the conclusion of an Austrian treaty instead of within three months.

The British Government is far from enthusiastic about arranging a new "Big Four" meeting immediately the Paris treaties are ratified.

A U.S. Government spokesman in Washington made a guarded comment on M. Mendes-France's proposal without directly committing itself to Big Four talks in May.

Sir Anthony Eden, the Foreign Secretary, rejected a proposal in the House of Commons last week that he should suggest new talks with the Soviet Union between ratification and effective implementation of the Paris agreements.

Sir Anthony Eden said the Government would be ready to seek an understanding with the East only after the Paris treaties had been ratified and the West had achieved "stability and a common purpose".

His statement was interpreted in diplomatic quarters as meaning that he wanted to see good progress made in the raising of the first of the 12 divisions Federal Germany is due to contribute to Western defense before new negotiations with Russia.

CONFLICT SEEN

M. Mendes-France's suggested postponement of the withdrawal of troops from Austria conflicts with the latest agreed Western attitude to the settlement of this problem. In their last note to Moscow, the "Big Three" Western powers said merely that they would agree to a new meeting "to sign" the Austria draft treaty on the text suggested by the Russians themselves.

WELCOME REFERENCE

A Foreign Office statement tonight reiterated Sir Anthony Eden's House of Commons statement.

A Foreign Office spokesman said: "We wish to study the precise terms of M. Mendes-France's proposal on Austria."

But he welcomed the French Premier's statement that ratification of the Paris treaties must precede an East-West meeting.

The Foreign Office made it clear tonight that the French Premier, M. Pierre Mendes-France, had not consulted Britain before delivering his speech.

WASHINGTON COMMENT

Washington, Nov. 22. An official spokesman of the United States State Department today emphasised American willingness to join in East-West talks on Europe but only if they promised to be "fruitful" and after "adequate preparation."

He made this comment at a Press conference on the speech to the United Nations by M. Pierre Mendes-France.

The spokesman said: "The United States will study with the closest attention the interesting and important speech that has been made by the French Prime Minister of the United Nations General Assembly.

Soviet delegation sources disclosed that Mr. Vyshinsky drove to New York at his usual hour from the Glen Cove, Long Island mansion, where he lived with his wife and daughter and other members of the Soviet delegation.

He went directly to the offices of the delegation at 308 Park Avenue. After a few minutes at his desk, he got up and went out to take his photographs. As he was walking back to his desk, he stopped and said a short word to Mr. Gandy Boddy.

Mr. Gandy Boddy, who now takes over as editor-in-chief of the delegation's Look magazine, accompanied Mr. Vyshinsky to the United Nations General Assembly.

Mr. Vyshinsky then returned to his office and remained there until the end of the session.

GOEBBELS' TRIAL TODAY

Charged With Active Support
Of Nazi Regime
PROPERTY DISPOSAL
IN WEST BERLIN

Berlin, Nov. 23. Dr Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's Propaganda Minister, is to be tried by a German denazification court in West Berlin today.

The charges are "active support of the National Socialist regime and crimes against humanity." The purpose of the trial is to dispose of Goebbels' Berlin property.

When Soviet tanks rumbled through the burning streets of Berlin in April 1945, towards Hitler's shelter beneath the Chancellery in the Wilhelmstrasse, Dr Goebbels had his six children killed by injections of poison, made his beautiful blonde wife, Magda, bite on a phial of prussic acid, and then shot himself.

Black-uniformed bodyguards, on his orders, poured petrol over his body and set fire to it, but Soviet troops identified the remains.

BENCH OF THREE

The bench of three, comprising the President of the Court and two assessors, can find him "guilty" or "not guilty" on both charges, but not separately. "A few copies of his own newspaper, 'Der Angriff' (The Attack), alone would suffice to prove his guilt," the President of the Court, Herr Alwin Caesar Hardtke, said.

It was mainly in this newspaper that Dr Goebbels conducted his uninterrupted campaign of racial hatred which preceded and accompanied the gassing of millions of Jews in Nazi extermination camps.

According to the West Berlin denazification law, the Court can now only impose a fine, which should be "in accord with the degree of the defendant's guilt". In the Goebbels case, however, the fine is not expected to exceed 112,000 West marks (about £6,330)—the value of his property within the city boundaries. This consists of a palatial villa on Schwanenwerder (Swans' Island) in the Havel river, surrounded by a beautiful park which was once Dr Goebbels' favourite weekend refuge and the scene of his love affairs. The war-devastated estate is now derelict. It is occasionally used for infantry training by American troops stationed in West Berlin.

The Court has publicly summoned Dr Goebbels' heirs to attend the proceedings, but Court officials believe that no one will claim the property. His mother died in Reyd, in the Rhineland, Dr Goebbels' birthplace, last year at the age of 84. His brother Hans, once an influential insurance director, is also believed to be dead. His sister is said to be living in Bavaria, but her exact whereabouts are not known here.

A PRISONER

Harald Quandt, his wife's son by her first husband, Gunther Quandt, a Jewish industrialist, is said to be a prisoner-of-war in the Soviet Union.

Apart from the island, Goebbels had two more properties in or near Berlin, a palace east of the Brandenburg gate, next to the former United States Embassy, and a huge weekend estate at Lanke, on the northern outskirts of the city. Both were confiscated with the stroke of a pen by the Soviet authorities shortly after the war.

Information about a possible inheritance in West Germany is contradictory, because no official files on it are kept here. Some sources say that Dr Goebbels held 50 per cent of the shares in the UFA film company, but others recall that he squandered money on pompous gala receptions and garden parties, on actors and still more—on actresses.

Only one thing is known for certain—that he moved to Berlin from his Rhineland home in 1920 with nothing but a cardboard under his arm.

During the last years of the war, he drew 100,000 Reichsmarks a month.

PAKISTAN DISSOLVES PROVINCIAL BORDERS

Karachi, Nov. 22.—Pakistan's Prime Minister, Mr. Mohammed Ali, announced tonight his government had decided to dissolve all the existing provinces of Pakistan to make the country a federation of two units—West Pakistan and East Pakistan.

The main reason for the proposed action, he said, was to unify the people by eradicating the sense of provincialism. It would also make acceleration of the development of the country, including its backward areas, and the saving of large administrative costs.

SPECIAL BROADCAST

Speaking to the nation "on a matter of vital importance," Mr. Ali said in a special broadcast tonight that the four provinces and ten princely states of West Pakistan would be amalgamated to form one administrative unit, with a population of 34 million and an area of 310,000 square miles.

East Bengal, to be renamed East Pakistan, with a population of 44 million and an area of 54,000 square miles, would form the second unit of the federation.

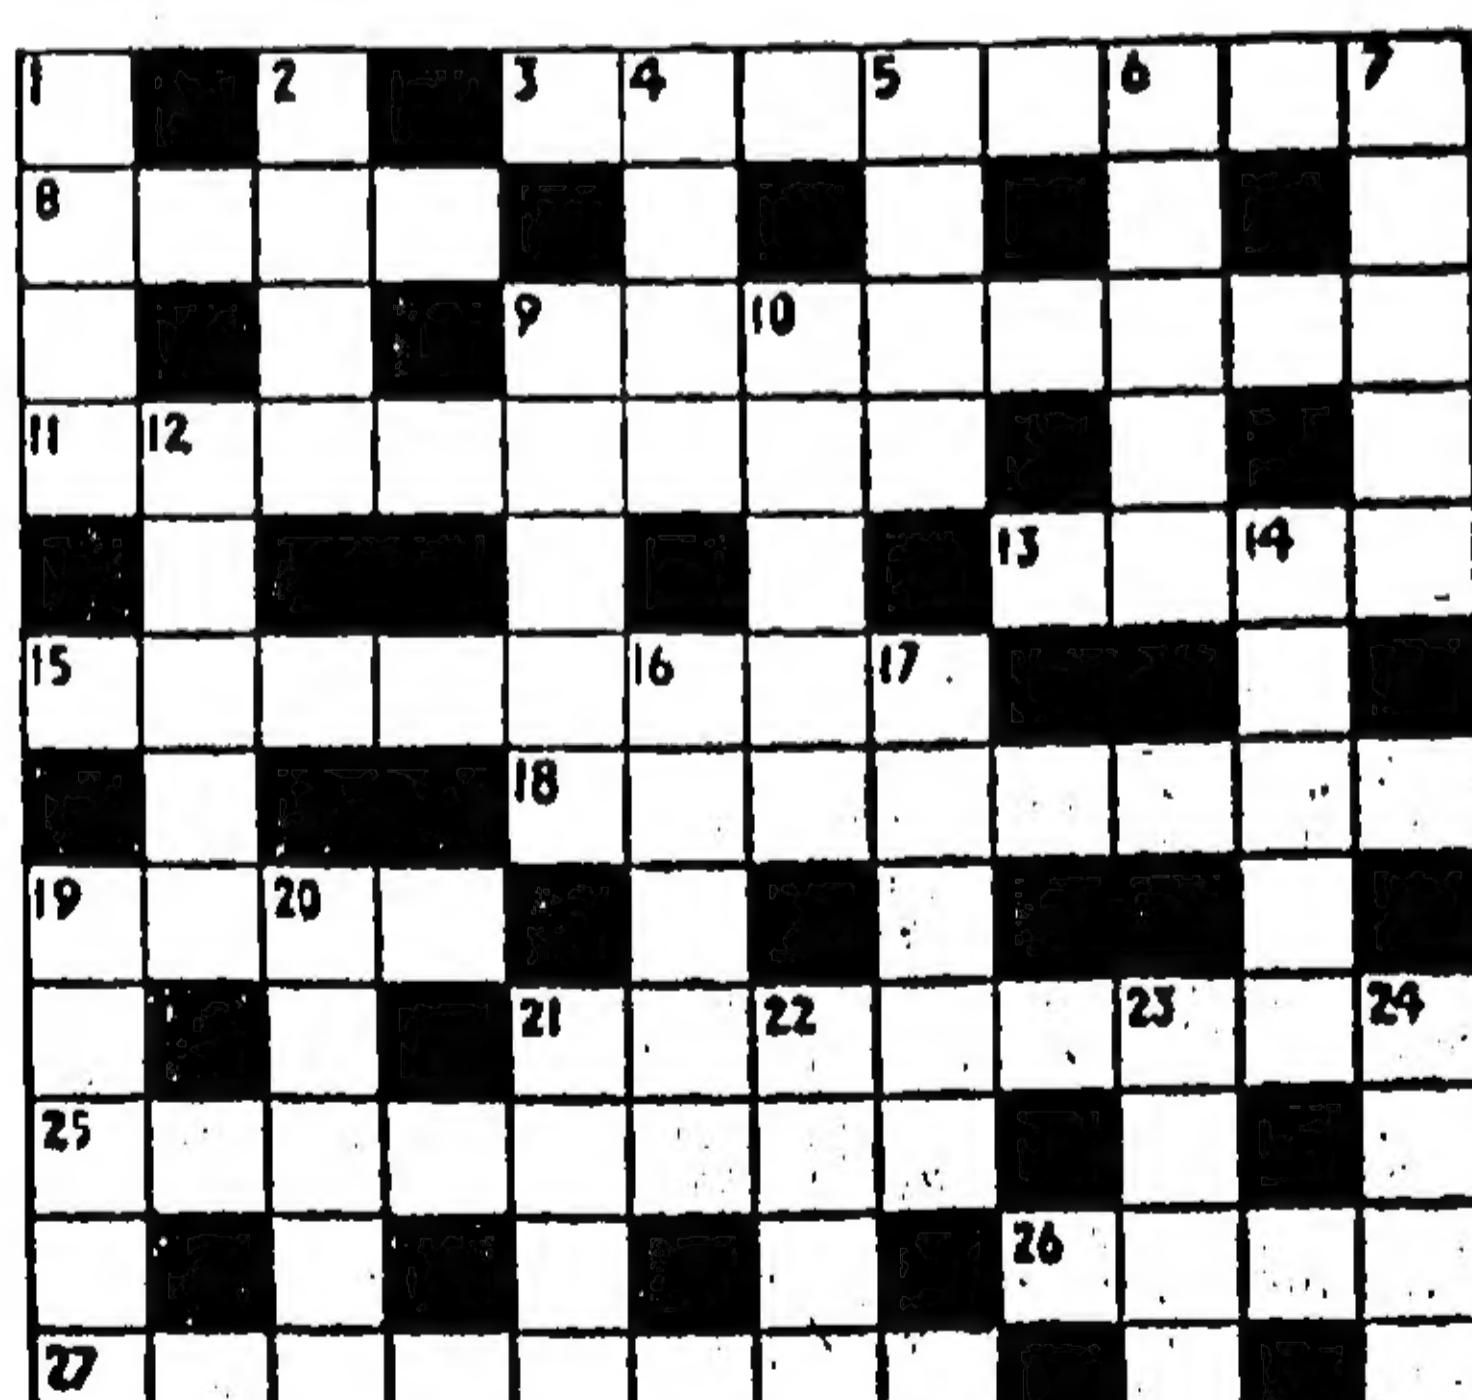

The Federal Government would co-ordinate and control both units. Mr. Ali did not indicate when the changes would be effective but said a body of administrative experts was working out administrative details.—Reuter.

Moscow, Nov. 22.—The Catholic Church of Mary Magdalene in Lvov, severely damaged by a direct hit during the war, has been restored according to the official Soviet news agency, Tass, today.

The restoration was carried out by parishioners with the active help of the city's architecture board, the agency said.

The Catholic Cathedral in Lvov and churches in Stryj, Gorodok and other towns of the Lvov region have also been renovated or restored, the agency added.—China Mail Special.

New York, Nov. 22.—The Soviet Union today formally tabled an amendment which would place the West's atoms-for-peace plan under the United Nations Security Council where the veto operates.

Speaking in the Political Committee of the General Assembly, Mr. A. A. Sobolov of the Soviet Union said there was need for "utter clarity" in the connection between the United Nations and the proposed international agency.

"We cannot subscribe to the reverse views of those delegates who feel that the relationship between the United Nations and the agency should be restricted to that existing between the United Nations and the specialised agencies," he said.

Mr. Sobolov asked the Committee's pardon for speaking on the peaceful uses of atomic energy but said that the head of the Soviet delegation, Mr. Andrei Vyshinsky, was "indisposed." The Committee's debate was subsequently adjourned when Mr. Vyshinsky's death was announced.

PROPOSALS

The proposed Soviet amendment read: "Recommend that the agency should be established as an agency responsible to the General Assembly and in the cases provided for by the charter of the United Nations to the Security Council."

Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, leader of India's delegation, announced that in the interest of unanimity, he was not pressing the Indian amendment to a vote. This amendment would place in the seven-power resolution a provision suggesting that member states "able and willing participate with the eight nations, now negotiating for the early establishment of the proposed international atomic agency."

Mr. Menon was grateful that the sponsors had accepted all except one of the suggestions made by India.

But what the sponsors had not accepted was the most important point and that explained why he submitted an amendment in the hope of exercising what might be called "legitimate pressure" on the sponsors to give the fullest consideration to the Indian point of view.

Mr. Menon pointed out that it was not India alone which felt that improvement was needed in the resolution. He quoted extracts from the speeches of the delegations of the Philippines, Burma, Lebanon, Sweden and Yugoslavia all of whom, Mr. Menon said, had wanted improvements in one direction or another.

ALL REGIONS

Mr. Menon said the assurances given by the United States representative that the initial membership of the agency would include all regions of the world had narrowed down these differences.

Mr. Menon had not concluded his speech when the Chairman made the announcement of Mr. Vyshinsky's death and the committee adjourned as a mark of respect.—Reuter.

Not Illegal To Counterfeit Old Coins

The Hague, Nov. 22.—A spokesman of Interpol, the International Police Commission, confirmed here today that it was not illegal to counterfeit currency which was no longer legal tender.

He had been asked to comment on a official of Interpol's forgery branch headquarters here, on yesterday's report from Genoa that four Italians had been acquitted on a charge of forging gold sovereigns.

The court's acquittal was well grounded in law, he said.

"But if the counterfeitors tried to pass the sovereigns off as genuine antiques, that would be a crime," he declared.

The Italians told the court that they are making the sovereigns to serve as decorations not as currency.—Reuter.

Mr. Menon said the assurances given by the United States representative that the initial membership of the agency would include all regions of the world had narrowed down these differences.

The worst hit area was "Sunny Sicily" which accounted for 16 of the victims, including eight crewmen of a fishing trawler missing for one week in a storm. The rest of the death toll was caused by exposure, falling power cables and other weather accidents.—United Press.

The police said the trouble started when the priest sought to establish a parallel between persecution of German Catholics under Hitler and present conditions in Argentina.

APPLICABLE HERE

After referring to Papal encyclicals dealing with Nazi persecutions, the police said, the priest added:

"The circumstances are aplicable to the present epoch of our country is living through

Then, as nowhere, children were imprisoned and disturbed

by the action of the Government and we, the clergymen, were labelled, persecuted and arrested."

According to the police version, Fr. Carboni then said Argentine bishops would release a pastoral letter indicating the line of conduct the Church must follow in the face of the "attitude taken by the Government against the Church."

At this point, the police said, several women, reportedly members of the Catholic Action, reproached the priest for dealing with political subjects in his sermon.

Fr. Carboni was reported to have replied: "Be quiet, you chatterboxes."

THREE INJURED

The women then rose from their seats and suggested that the congregation leave the church. In the ensuing commotion three women were trampled and injured.

The police finally arrived, restored order and arrested Fr.

Carboni on charges of disturbing the peace and causing several persons to be injured.—United

FILM EXTRAS

Bruges, Nov. 22.—More than 400 unemployed Belgians were given work as "extras" during the making of the British film "The Prisoner," based on the story of Cardinal Mindszenty's imprisonment by the Hungarian Communists. The film which co-stars Alec Guinness and Jack Hawkins, was shot in Bruges' medieval law courts and in the town streets. The extras received just over £1 a day.—China Mail Special.

Supersonic Fighters For A-Bombers

Washington, Nov. 22.—The Air Force today unveiled a new supersonic fighter plane designed to escort Strategic Air Command atomic bombers or deliver atomic weapons itself deep in enemy territory.

The "strategic fighter" is the F-101 Voodoo which made its first public appearance on rolling from the McDonnell Aircraft Corporation's plant at St. Louis, Missouri.

The Air Force refused to give any performance or other statistics about Voodoo except to say that "it is in the supersonic class and is capable of carrying atomic weapons."

LEMAY'S COMMAND

The plane is being assigned to General Curtis E. Lemay's Strategic Air Command to meet requirements for a long range fighter.

The plane obviously is very large for jet fighter, possibly weighing as much as 40,000 pounds.

The Air Force's guarded announcement indicated that the Voodoo could escort 600-mile-an-hour B-47 and B-52 bombers on long range missions, evidently by in-flight refuelling. It also could strike deep in enemy territory on atomic missions of its own, perhaps paving the way for heavier onslaughts by bombers.

An earlier version of the Voodoo was flight-tested this Autumn at Edwards Air Force base in California's Mojave desert.

NO SPEED ESTIMATE

While no speed estimate was available on the F-101, observers believed it could exceed 800 miles per hour, which is about the speed of the North American F-100 Super-Sabre interceptor.

The Super-Sabre is the first in the so-called "Century Series."

In addition there are the Convair F-102 all-weather fighter and the Lockheed F-104 which has a speed of about 1,000 miles per hour and is designed to combat enemy fighters over ground battle areas.

The Voodoo is powered by two Pratt and Whitney J-57 jet engines, each developing 10,000 pounds of thrust at the speed of sound.—United Press.

UNITED NATIONS TRIBUTES TO VYSHINSKY

New York, Nov. 22:

The President of the United Nations General Assembly, Mr. Elco Van Kleefens, of the Netherlands, today convened a plenary meeting of the 60 member countries in plenary session to speak of the death of Mr. Andrei Vyshinsky.

"None of us who had the opportunity to take part in debate with him will ever forget his quick mind, his extraordinary vitality, his irony, his quite exceptional gift of dialectics," Mr. Van Kleefens said.

"We shall not forget Mr. Vyshinsky, one of our ablest colleagues, and we mourn his passing."

RUSSIAN OFFER

NATO Nations Drafting Rejection

Paris, Nov. 22.

Representatives of the 14 North Atlantic Treaty Organisation nations met today to draft similar replies rejecting Russia's invitation to a European security conference.

The United States, Britain and France later this week are expected to turn down the Soviet proposal which is aimed at stopping the rearmament of Germany and the formation of the Western European Union. The other NATO powers invited to follow suit.

"At his grave I place the memory of days gone by when all of us, side by side, were striving for common victory."

The NATO representatives met at the Palais de Chaillot, headquarters of the Organisation, to co-ordinate their replies.

Their refusal will turn down the November 20 date for the proposed conference but leave the way open for Big Four talks some time after the Paris German rearmament pact have been ratified, informed sources said.

"To the old fighter who today has gone to rest, we can say no loftier tribute than to offer up to his memory the memories of the glories we held in the Big Three."

Replies were drafted by Allied experts in London and brought here for the guidance of the other NATO powers.—United Press.

24 DEAD IN COLD WAVE

Rome, Nov. 22.

The authorities today said that at least 24 persons have died in the cold wave that dropped temperatures in shivering Italy.

The worst hit area was "Sunny Sicily" which accounted for 16 of the victims, including eight crewmen of a fishing trawler missing for one week in a storm. The rest of the death toll was caused by exposure, falling power cables and other weather accidents.—United Press.

YOUR BIRTHDAY... By STELLA

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 23

BORN today, you are original, inventive and a natural leader of others. You are, however, impulsive, even reckless, at times. You must learn to curb this characteristic for it often leads you into situations from which it is difficult to withdraw. If you run needless risks, you merely jeopardize a security which you could easily afford you. You are highly opinionated. Nine times out of ten you are right, even when the minority opinion. But there are times when you count—the instance when you permitted impulse rather than reason to rule!

You have high standards of justice and fight for what you believe to be right against any and all kinds of odds. You have a rather rigid, regimented mind. Even though you do not like him, his place in your memory and stays there, ready to be pulled out when necessary. This will be your birthday star.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 24

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)—Be careful on the job. Outside of office hours or at home, make no secret of your arguments with those you love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 21-Jan. 20)—You are becoming a more careful mother, and a little more patient than usual in your handling of it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 18)—If driving in heavy traffic, keep eyes on the road, especially if you are not as careful as you are.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20)—Acting on impulse today will not give you the desired results. Consider all your plans carefully, first.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19)—Your energies might be misdirected today. Be sure that you exert your efforts only on behalf of important things.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 21)—Be careful of the operation of mechanical appliances. Carelessness could lead to their injury—and yours.

THE weighty dictum: "Human nature does not change, radio music is still the food of love," reminded me of a song I wrote long ago for an English restaurant proprietor. If music be the food of love, Turn on the radio, For "Sauce Madere," and "a la Reine."

"Trufe," "Delmonico," And "Bearnaise," and "Hol-lendaise."

"Au Four," and "Bechamel." All, all come out of little time. To keep our people well.

The question at issue

Cocklecarrot: I now make a superhuman effort to get back to the point of this baffling case. What we have to decide is whether the defendant broke the law by appearing in theatrical costume at a Sunday concert. Is a false nose part of a costume, like a cloak or a coat of mail? Are gaudy braces a breach of the law, or unintentionally comic boots of an outlandish hue? Or spots? Do minnows not curv'e, as a fellow judge of mine said when unjustly sentencing a tiny man who had crept into an empty tea-urn at a Police Outing. Now, it is clear that the defendant wore the nose. But it was not a real nose, so like a real nose that his accompanist one day faints when he handed it to her. She thought there had been an accident. And she screamed, "Oh, Mr. Tinstall!"

Tinstall: She is a friend of Geoff! We are old friends. Cocklecarrot: The point is interesting as social history, but immaterial to the case.

Gooseboots: With great respect, m'lud, I would suggest that if an old friend was thus deceived, the nose cannot be empty theatrical in design.

Is this censorship justified? CENSORSHIP run mad?"

How a leading publisher described the expurgated edition of the "List of Huntingdonshire's Cabmen." With withering scorn this outspoken authority said,

"We shall have an expurgated Huntingdon next, someone having discovered that the 10.47 from Chepstow to Aberystwyth puts ideas into children's heads. That will be followed by an expurgated anthology of fat-stock prices from 1946 to 1949, inclusive."

Meantime, a Huntingdon man who haled a cab refused to be driven by Ottawa, G. L., because, as he said,

"They've not put you in the new List." A case of victimisation which is not likely to give the country a good name.

Another practical hint: HOW to push a football through the wires of a harp.

West returned a diamond, and Crawford ruffed. Continuing with his plan, Crawford led the queen of spades and let it ride for a finesse. When this held, he led his last trump to dummy's ace, thus drawing West's king.

Without the slightest hesitation, East threw the nine of hearts on the third round of trumps. The size of the discard was intended to deceive declarer.

at the location of the missing hearts; the speed and the apparent unconcern were intended to conceal the fact that East was already squeezed.

As it happened, Crawford was not deceived. He promptly cashed the ace of hearts and led another heart toward dummy. West played low, and Crawford unhesitatingly went up with dummy's queen on the theory that West would not have overcalled twice on a five-card suit without both of the missing kings.

You are valuable as a consultant. Although you are inclined to be overly critical and will tear something down—just to be different—make sure that your opinion is well deserved. Just be sure that when you destroy an idea, you can suggest a better one to replace it.

The process involves fusing a kind of glass made in different colours on metal—the best for the purpose is copper, though silver is unsurpassed. Even today, she adds, made jewellery centuries ago, she adds, made jewellery a few tools, an inexpensive kiln, a small supply of sheet copper and a few ounces of coloured enamels are needed.

Anyone can learn to make professional-looking enamelled jewellery, said instructor Ruth Randall. Only a few tools, an inexpensive kiln, a small supply of sheet copper and a few ounces of coloured enamels are needed.

The jeweller next goes into the kiln for three or four minutes of firing at about 1,500 degrees.

"Although the techniques have been revised over the years, the methods of producing these handsome pieces of jewellery aren't dissimilar to the methods used by the Russians in Byzantine times," Mrs. Randall says. "These Russians centuries ago, she adds, made jewellery a kind of glass made in different colours on metal—the best for the purpose is copper, though silver is unsurpassed. Colour may not be everyone's idea of making hair fashionable, but for those who like to experiment with the new colour rinses, Raymond suggests new colours of "magenta" and "peacock blue." He achieves with them either a coloured "halo" or an all-over dappled look.

For those who are not sure that they want to commit themselves to a new colour indefinitely, he has prepared a semi-permanent colour rinse which lasts through six shampooings, then conveniently fades away.

Women are looking out for gloves in a new washable leather. In cheerful colours like sunburnt red and peacock's feathers, these are the first feathered gloves to have "guaranteed washable" label. They will be exported all over the world and the washing instructions go with them have been translated into ten languages.

Second, hats, Londoners who tend to keep their hats for special occasions rather than wear them every day, are buying head-hugging hats of the padding-bill variety, half hats of feathers, or wavy-brimmed Garboesque affairs. Normal greens and browns are forsaken for bright colours like sky pink and peacock blue.

Third, hairstyles. Hair may not be your crowning glory, but if expertly shaped it can be a valuable accessory. You may wonder whether the new longer look will suit you.

It is not suitable for everyone. West End hairdresser, Raymond, makes it clear to his clients that "length of hair will depend on length of neck—not on the whims of fashion." There will be no short necks swamped by long hair, no short styles perched above a long neck—if he can prevent it.

Whether or not the Dior silhouette—the H-line—has appeared in your corner of the world yet, the chances are that it will. Its main features—long waistline and small hips—have already been copied by manufacturers.

Now the first Dior foundation garments have been made in London by a Hungarian corsetier.

Looking like something out of a Victorian costume museum, they have a long bone every two inches to curve the figure into the correct Dior shape.

She assured me that they were "really quite comfortable," and then proceeded to show me something that had come out of a costume museum. Trimmed with roses and lace, it had been "translated" into a corset.

They may be comfortable, and their modern counterparts may be fashionable. But they are not the ideal for jumping on and off buses, and doing the chores. Women who have followed Dior faithfully till now will, I'm sure, think twice about their allegiance—at least till he moves away from his H-line.

WOLVES' VICTORY OVER SPARTAK WAS JUST WHAT ENGLAND NEEDED

Says TOM FINNEY

At last we had a badly needed victory for English football. The fact that Wolves beat Spartak by four goals to nil will not in itself beat the Germans at Wembley on Wednesday week—but it will give us a new confidence and stimulus.

I sat in the stand with the rest of the England party at Molineux, and you should have heard us cheering! Afterwards, in the streets of Wolverhampton, it was like a carnival night. Roy Bentley, Ron Staniforth and the rest of us were still talking about the match just before we parted on the following day after the practice games at Villa Park.

This has been one of my busiest and most interesting weeks for a long time. On Saturday we had that hectic match with the Wolves. We were three goals down and still made a draw of it. I was much less troubled by that wretched selection of mine—and I felt I had a pretty good game; the Press seemed to think so, too.

I know some people have been saying: "If Tom Finney isn't fit, why should he play at all?" Sometimes I have felt a bit that way myself; it is not very comforting to know that with a physical handicap, you can't even expect to give your best.

But I have kept playing on doctor's orders—as part of the treatment to get it out of my system. When I came off the field after the Wolves match, I felt a new man.

BEST IN COUNTRY

A party of Spartak officials had been watching our game and as I was leaving, the dressing room afterwards the Preston Chairman, Mr. Nat Buck, introduced me to them. They gave me a badge which I believe is a Spartak club emblem. They were very complimentary about our match with Wolves.

I presume they realised that they would be up against it at Wolverhampton. I guess they would be, because these Wolves are the best team in the country.

We ourselves have been beaten by Manchester United, who are a fine enough side—but Stan Cullis' men have not got the edge on all of us.

Young Ron Flowers was not playing at Preston, but Eddie Campion, a strong lad, stepped in and we certainly faced a tremendous middle line with Billy Wright at centre-half and Bill Slater on the other flank.

Roy Swinburne, Wolves' centre-forward, is one of the stars of the season. He looks a world beater now—he has fine ball control, which he uses intelligently, and he is dangerous. Mr. Cullis seems endowed with riches.

On Monday, England's team manager, Mr. Walter Winterbottom, rang up my own manager, Mr. Frank Hill, to hear the latest report on my scatica and, in a result, Mr. Hill rang me with a request to report at West Bromwich to join the England party.

LOOK OUT, GERMANY!

I had treatment on Tuesday morning and then drove straight to Molineux to watch Spartak with the others. Both Roy Bentley, who was my roommate in the hotel, and Ron Staniforth thought Spartak played better than they did against Arsenal.

The Russians did not strike me as in quite the same class as the Hungarians, but we must remember that Spartak are a club and not a national side. Their left-half Igor Netto was, I thought, the best man on the field—certainly one of the best wing half-backs I have ever seen.

But I come back to the point I made last week. Any foreign team coming to Britain now must negotiate our own peculiar conditions. On a hard, dry ground Spartak, I am sure, would be harder to beat. Conversely, it would be a treat to play again in the next month some of those teams who have beaten us in the past twelve months. So look out, Germany!

COACHING HINT

You often hear someone in the crowd shout, "Get into line!" It's a call for the full-back to tackle an advancing winger—and often it is bad advice. A full-back retreats to give the rest of the defence time to cover. By retreating as slowly as possible he can perhaps cover the man with the ball and the man to whom it is most likely to be passed.

The Russian team's mark for 25 double shots in the running deer event was 828 points, while Norway's 1952 record was 759.—United Press.

"PROFESSIONALS"

Caraques, Nov. 22. Delegates from several countries have protested to the International Shooting Union that members of the Soviet and United States teams in the World Shooting Championships are professionals.

The chief objections came from Latin American states, who said that the real amateurs are the Swedes, Norwegian, Finns and the Swiss.

The delegates complained that the Soviet marksmen, backed by their Government, have every facility for costly training. They also alleged that the U.S. had included "professionals" like Benner and Cook, and that the U.S. team also included the shooting instructor of West Point Military Academy.

The professionalism question referred to the Union on November 14. The problem was left over in a later meeting and there is little likelihood of a decision being taken before next year.—France-Press.

WORLD RECORD

In the trap-jarre on silhouettes test, the USSR officially beat the world record with 1,130 points, Finland fifth with 1,128 and Switzerland was reckoned to be sixth with 1,121 points.

In the individual placings, Sweden's Tulster Ullmann was leading with 297 points and threatening the world record held by Reeves (US) with 579 points (total for precision and rapid-fire).

Unofficial counts gave Cuba fourth place in the precision test with 1,130 points, Finland fifth with 1,128 and Switzerland was reckoned to be sixth with 1,121 points.

In the test 80 shots were allowed from 25 metres in six precision-shooting series of five shots. The time limit for each series was six minutes. There were also six series of five rapid-fire shots at silhouettes.

83 Countries Get Invitations To Olympics

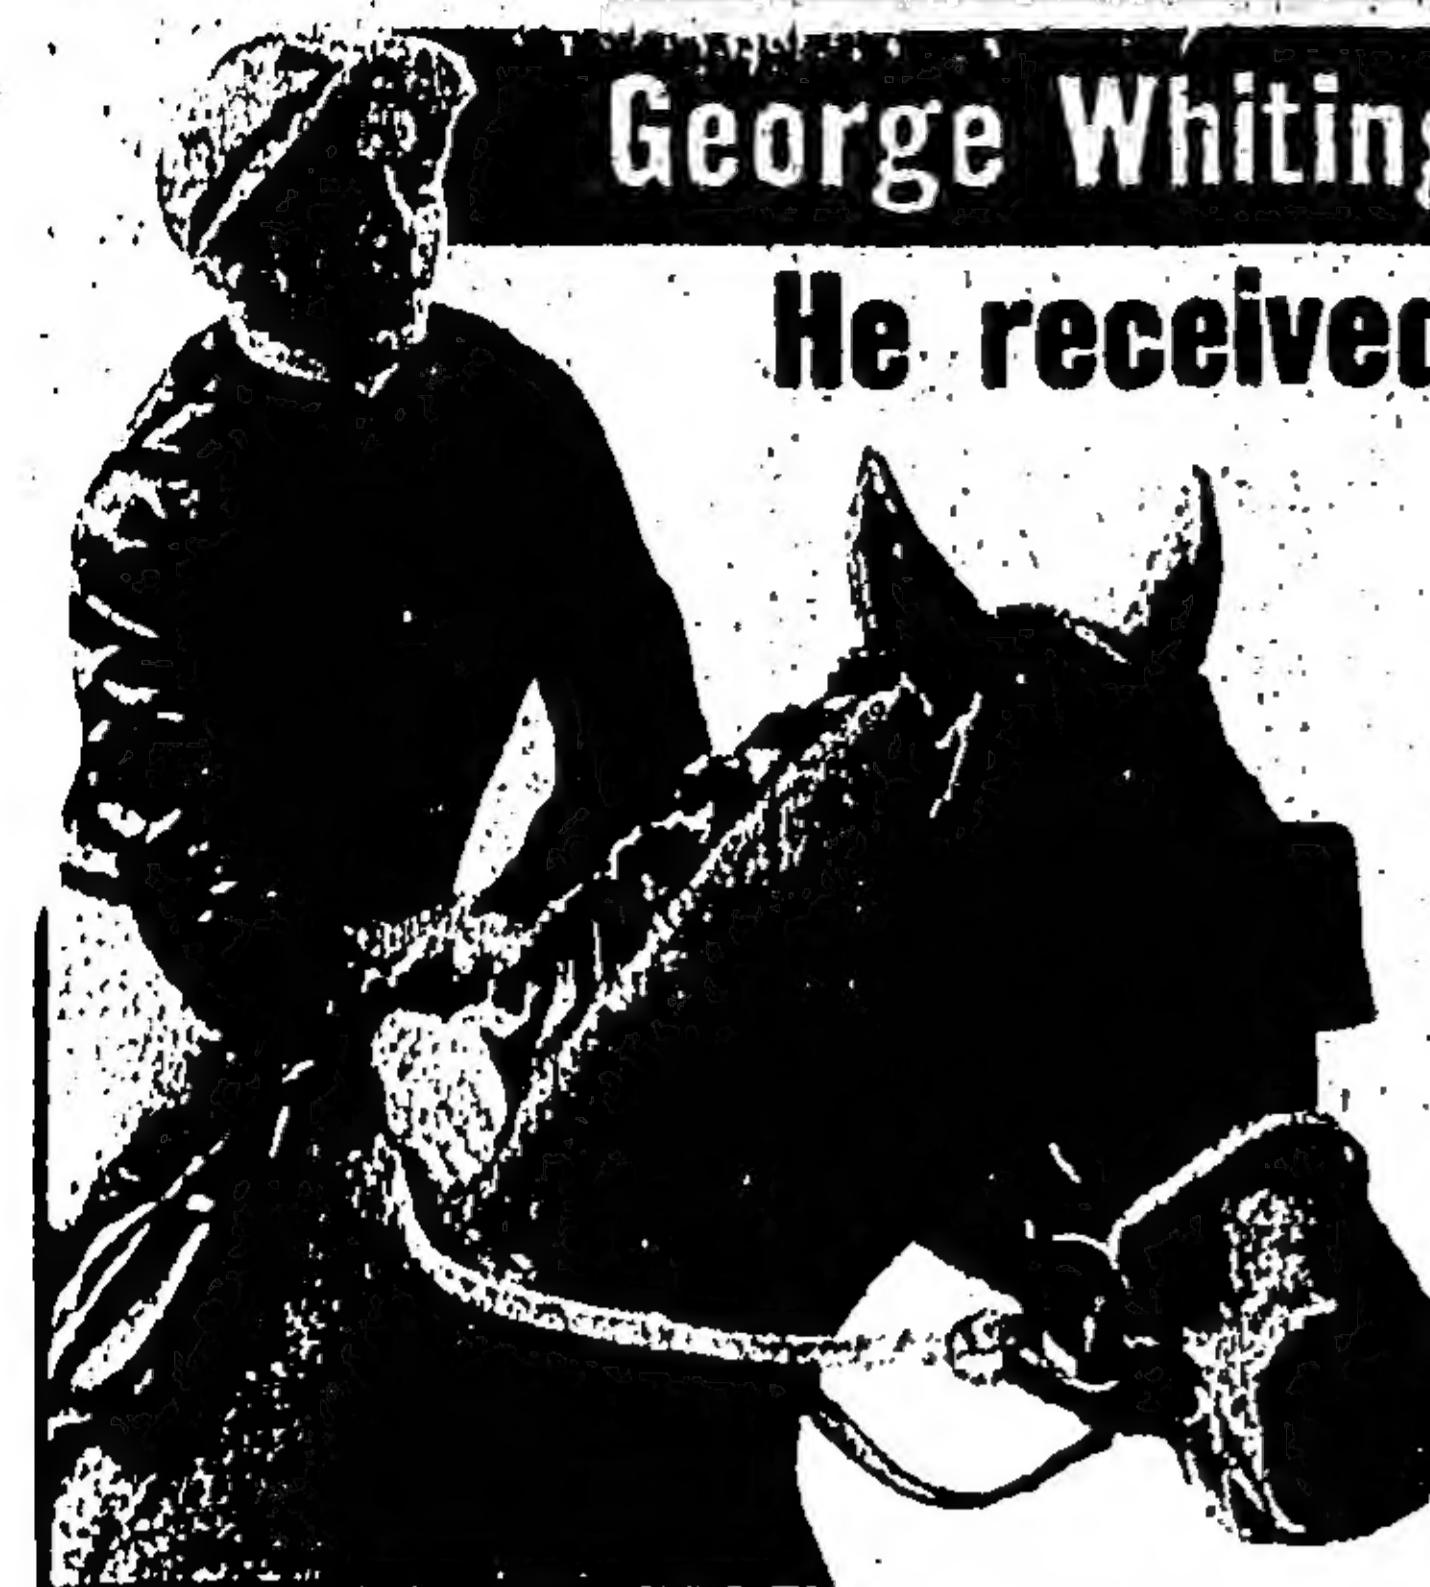

Canberra, Nov. 22.
Eighty-three countries have been invited by Australia, the host nation, to compete in the 1956 Olympic Games in Melbourne.

New Zealand and the United States were the first to accept. Mr. W. S. Kent Hughes, Chairman of the Organising Committee announced today.

He added that the Committee expected that about 70 countries would send about 8,000 athletes.

Preliminary estimates indicated that neighbouring Asian countries would send their best teams ever, but some of the European teams would be smaller.

"Everything points to the Melbourne Games being a spectacular success," he said. "Two years before the Games open, preparations are at least as far advanced as they were at this stage in the organisation of any games in the past."

IT ALL STARTED WITH A DONKEY

One year later, Smith Minor was throwing belleto punches in the Stable Lads boxing competition at Marlborough, and waxing so mighty at 4st. 11lb. that Major Steed mounted him again in the same race at Salisbury. This time he won on a horse called Denia.

That 4st. 11lb. has now acquired muscle and tissue to a total of 1st. 8lb., a weight that permits his fortunate owner to pursue his vocation on normal bacon breakfasts.

"No fasting for me—never had a Turkish bath in my life. I would sooner carry overweight, or finish altogether," he declared.

FOUND IN HAND

"My racing valet Harry Yorke, told me when I was led to keep a pound in hand, and that's the way it has always been, thanks be."

Since Denia in 1932, and with intervals for Army service, he has ridden new, thumb and fore-concussion, and had operation on his stomach. In his winter holiday curling in Switzerland, comes straight home to the children—Michael and Wendy—after racing.

He invests his money in Gildeged and Life Insurance. Gambling in any shape or form is out. Repeat out.

So far Smith Minor has yet to do better than a second and a third in the Derby. But he made an imperishable mark in the classics on Hypericum, winner of the 1,000 Guineas in 1940 for King George VI.

HEADSTRONG

"Hypericum was a headstrong filly," he recalled, pitching another leg on the fire. "She took a fly-jump at the starting gate, sat me on the grass, galloped off full pelt over the whole course and finished up in the ear park."

"They put me in an ambulance, but I met Hypericum on the way back and remounted. I kept her back at the restart and lost seven lengths. But she won all right."

"The King was not there, but when I unsaddled, our present

DRYMOUCHED

At 13 he entered the Wantage Stables of Major Fred Sneyd, and at 13½ he was riding his first loser, in the City Bowl at Salisbury.

Actually, it is a cosy country house—with Mrs. Patricia Smith, a vivacious blonde, as châtelaine.

FAMILY PICTURE

You know the sort of place—logs on the fire, dogs on the rug, huge bowls of pink chrysanthemums, children in bed, horsey pictures on the wall, your host decanting and your hostess hovering. Typically English—and what is wrong with that on a dirty November night?

Our new champion fits the family picture perfectly. He runs a Bentley for himself and a Vauxhall for his wife, watches films and fights, likes his winter holiday curling in Switzerland, comes straight home to the children—Michael and Wendy—after racing.

But it has not always been a joy-ride. In fact, he once rode a heart-break sequence of 11 consecutive losers.

Fire Jumped Road

He plotted fires on a map and finished his call just in time. A falling tree cut the line and fire jumped the road to isolate the town.

The reporter told how the fire trucks, directed from the head-quarters, attacked the fire at danger spots and held it at bay.

One truck burst through a 40-foot wall of fire and rescued a farmer and his wife," the reporter continued. "Power sprays prevented the walls from catching alight and saved the house."

Dawn saw the town safe. At 9 o'clock in the morning, the fire control officer became a manager again and the fire crews were back to their normal jobs."

One of the newest problems in fire-fighting in Australia is the attitude of immigrants, who now form almost one tenth of Australia's population.

Many of the latest arrivals do not realise the seriousness of bushfires in Australia.

Country magistrates are teaching some lessons by giving lectures when they fine people who have lighted illegal fires during a period of fire hazard.

Court reports last summer frequently listed immigrants' names as payers of £10 and £20 fines for breaches of the laws. But Australians, who should have known better, were often fined £50 or £100.

Once, now Australians have seen a bushfire, they need no further lessons. And says a fire officer in a country district of Victoria, they make better fire-fighters than those born and bred here.

Used to Orders

European immigrants, he added, "are used to being given orders and carrying them out without question."

Australians are more independent and will carry out their orders for action themselves without being told what to do," he said.

The reporter, however, did not believe that the immigrants had been fully responsible for the fires.

The Vickers Viscount for which the United States has agreed to issue an American Certificate of Airworthiness after protracted negotiations.

American-British Accord On Viscount C. of A.

Agreement between the Civil Aeronautics Administration of the USA and Great Britain's Air Registration Board on the conditions under which the Viscount will be granted an American Certificate of Airworthiness marks the success of negotiations which have been going on over many months, and opens up a yet further field for exploitation by a world-famous airliner. It is a tribute to the skill and understanding of the airworthiness experts of both countries, and underlines at a critical point in its history the unrivalled knowledge and ability of the Air Registration Board in the gas turbine field.

Actual certification of the Viscount in the U.S.A. will not take place until one of the aircraft is available in America for inspection by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, but this can be little more than a formality now that the discussions between the A.R.B. and C.A.A., which have gone deep into every aspect of safety and airworthiness, have reached a satisfactory end.

STAR STAR STAR

The agreement means that the Viscount can be operated under American rules of the air without any significant operational or economic penalty. Naturally, the aircraft will operate under performance rules which differ somewhat from those obtaining in Great Britain. For one thing, there must be a slight reduction in maximum take-off weight on American routes where the shade temperatures exceed 100°F. Such temperatures are very rare indeed on the routes operated by Capital Airlines, which is purchasing 40 Viscounts.

The Air Registration Board is the independent authority in the United Kingdom to whom the Minister of Transport and Civil Aviation has delegated responsibility for issue of Certificates of Airworthiness. The Board represents Britain at International Civil Aviation Organisation divisional meetings. Its form and methods derive from those proven over many years in shipbuilding; the A.R.B. may claim to be the Lloyd's of the air. Its Board represents users of merchant aircraft, manufacturers, insurers and representatives of the general public, presided over by Lord Brabazon. Policy is interpreted by a technical staff under Mr. Robert Hinchliffe, Secretary of the Board, and Dr. Walter Gove, the headeronautical engineer who is the Board's chief technical advisor.

STAR STAR STAR

A new British radio compass, which helps pilots of jet aircraft to find their base at high speed, even in bad weather, is now available for civil aircraft.

Made by the GEC Radio Company, the instrument was developed in co-operation with the Royal Aircraft Establishment, Farnborough. Operated by radio link, initially it would locate the aircraft in the ground station. In the ground station, the radio link connects with a transponder which transmits the aircraft's position to the radio compass.

The radio compass is a development of the GEC radio compass, which has been in use for many years in civil aircraft. It has been designed to meet the needs of the new generation of jet aircraft. The radio compass is a valuable addition to the equipment of modern aircraft, providing a reliable and accurate method of navigation.

AMERICAN ECONOMY

Businessmen Optimistic Over Forecasts Of Continuing Progress

By John Morka

New York, Nov. 22. Problems of world trade occupied the economic spotlight in the United States last week as 2,000 business executives, importers and industrialists heard optimistic forecasts of reports of continuing progress towards a more liberalised and less restrictive world trade.

At the same time, the three-day assembly of the National Trade Council heard pleas by ranking U.S. Government officials for the removal of cumbersome trade practices and for the importance of obtaining for Japan full partnership in the economic life of Western nations.

Underlying these world-wide aims was strong sentiment among American businessmen that the U.S. Government must give them stronger assistance in financing exports to meet foreign competition. At the same time, there was considerable emphasis on the necessity for the U.S. to take the initiative as one of the stronger creditor nations of the world in promoting world trade by lifting some of its tariffs as a prerequisite to freer world trade and ultimately to currency convertibility in an increasingly larger scale.

Despite these global aspirations, stress was placed on the necessity for continued strong level of U.S. exports, increasing dependence on private capital rather than Government funds in economic development programmes, for a general reduction in foreign aid as such and for a world-wide lifting of trade barriers.

MORE HOPEFUL

Backgrounding these points was the overriding conviction among delegates that strong U.S. economy and continuing prosperity in Europe were basic to any fundamental overhaul of world trade practices and patterns. Businessmen in attendance were generally more hopeful than in months about the prospects for further progress in this connection, buoyed in part by the rising pickup in U.S. economic activity and forecasts of a high level of operations next year.

Elsewhere, it was a big week in American business.

Steel operations reached 80 per cent of capacity for the best production week since the middle of last December.

Automobile companies continued to turn out new models at a fast clip. They plan to continue at a rapid rate into 1955 and even plan to build inventories against the prospects of a strike in the industry. Auto makers, like many other users of steel, have permitted their inventories of steel to run so low they practically are operating on a hand-to-mouth basis right now.

Competition for new business continues all along the line. Advertising budgets will reach top levels next year, according to a Wall Street Journal survey, as business leaders jockey for the competitive edge. Of 103 big and little companies surveyed, 67 plan bigger budgets for next year. Nine can't or won't say, 23 report little or no change and only four planned a reduction in advertising.—United Press.

Construction continued to gain. Figures available for the month of October show a substantial gain over last year. For the year 1954, building will total $37,000,000,000, a new record high. Government experts say next year will be up seven per cent from this year's top. Government economists generally point to the optimistic forecasts for the construction industry as indications that 1955 will be another second-best year for business a little better than this year but not quite as good as 1953.

CRUDE OIL

Crude oil production rose on the week but was higher than a year ago. Petrol production increased but use continued to rise as inventories of the fuel declined. So did stocks of fuel oil and kerosene.

For the month of October, industrial production showed a gain of two per cent over September, but it was still five per cent under a year ago.

Along with a rise in business volume for the week, the stock market reacted with activity. Sales in the Wednesday session easily attained the four-million-share level. Prices tumbled from 1952, but just missed bottom bottom.

The seven mills have between them a milling capacity of over 1,000,000 tons per month. United Press.

Brazil's Wheat Requirements

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 22. Edmundo Barrosa Da Silva, chief of the Foreign Ministry's Economic Department, announced today that Brazil's wheat requirement for 1955 will be filled primarily by Argentina, Uruguay, and Russia.

He said Argentina would supply some 750,000 tons,

Uruguay between 300,000

and 400,000 tons and

Russia between 300,000 and 500,000 tons.

Russia this year provided 180,000 tons through

Finland which served as a

Demonstration Of Fight Given In Murder Trial

Demonstrations of the position he and the accused were in when they struggled for possession of a cobbler's knife was given by a witness when his cross-examination at the trial of Yau Tak, 47, cobbler, charged with the murder of a woman, Man Chau-fun, in a tenement flat at 271 Yu Chau Street, first floor, Shamshui po, was continued before Mr Justice J. Reynolds and a Jury at the Criminal Sessions this morning.

The witness, Chan Yan, was the husband of the dead woman, and the accused was called out of the dock to the body of the Court to aid witness in his demonstration.

The woman died in hospital on August 20, after she had been gashed in the abdomen by the knife allegedly during a three-cornered struggle between her husband, the accused, and herself on the night of August 27. The fight developed from a quarrel between deceased and Chan Yan's wife. It was alleged by the Crown that there had been friction between the two families for some time prior to the incident.

Mr W. A. Blair-Kerr, Senior Crown Counsel, appeared for the Prosecution, and Mr O. V. Cheung, instructed by Mr F. Zimmerman, of Messrs F. Zimmerman and Co., was for the Defence. HO KUI IN BED

Chan Yan said earlier that he was in bed when accused approached him and asked him to go to the street for a fight. This was after the quarrel between their respective wives had been in progress for some 10 minutes. Before he could get up, he alleged, accused struck him twice with the cobbler's knife. He then seized the knife, still in accused's possession, and they struggled for it.

Replies to Mr Cheung, witness said the struggle proceeded from his bed-space out to the verandah. The struggle was fierce and as witness was stronger than accused he pushed him out of the room. On the verandah, they struggled for about five minutes, during which they fell to the floor and there witness managed to wrest the knife off accused. He then released accused who ran off.

Mr Cheung then asked for accused to come out of the dock and witness showed the Court and Jury the portion they were in while struggling on the floor. A ruler was used in place of the knife for the purpose of the demonstration.

CALLED: "SAVE LIFE"

Witness said he could not remember exactly the position they were in as he concentrated his attention in getting the knife away from accused. He did not pay attention to where his wife was, but he remembered she called out "save life" several times as she followed the struggling men from the bed-space to the door.

He agreed she had participated in the struggle for a brief moment at the beginning.

Witness denied striking accused with his fist, but admitted biting him in the right forearm. He also denied grabbing accused below the waist.

Asked how accused came to have a bite mark on the right shoulder, witness said he bit him there too. He denied that the bite was caused by his wife, as suggested by Counsel.

Witness gave a further demonstration how he pinned accused down with his knees, leaned across him while still struggling for the knife, and bit him in the shoulder.

BIT HIM

He denied it was white he and accused were in this position that he called on his wife to grab the accused.

Mr Cheung put it to witness that his wife had leaned across accused and bit him, and then called out that her intestines were coming out. Witness denied this.

Counsel showed witness a blood-stained jacket and asked if he had heard the sound of tearing cloth as the knife cut through the jacket and wounded deceased.

Witness: Do you think a knife would make a sound when it went into a body?

Mr Cheung: What I think of you is not very charitable.

WITNESS'S DENIAL

Witness denied his wife's body came into contact with the knife as she leaned across accused in the course of the struggle. He also further denied that the wounds he himself had received were inflicted during the struggle.

Mr Harold Stassen Tells America

Increased East-West Trade May Put Off An Atomic Armageddon

Washington, Nov. 22.

America was told today that new Western trading policies permitting increased trade with the Soviet bloc in Europe might put off an atomic Armageddon and lead to peaceful co-existence between East and West.

Mr Harold Stassen, United States foreign aid chief, made this statement in a report to Congress in defence of the new trading rules. He detailed complex negotiations between the United States and 14 of its allies, including Britain and France, on revising strategic controls on exports from the West.

It was his fifth report to Congress on operations under the Battle Act, which gives the President authority to cut off American aid to any country selling strategic goods behind the Iron Curtain.

The Allied negotiations led to a decision in Paris this year to cut the number of strategic items banned from export and to tighten existing controls on the shortlisted list.

Mr Stassen said that before the Paris agreement he believed the revision proposed by Britain went further than the United States considered wise. "The period of peaceful co-existence" would be "uncomfortable and anxious."

The possibility of a split between Russia and Communist China, he said, lay in the Manchurian naval base and garrison maintained by Russia at the Manchurian cities of Port Arthur and Dairen.

At a news conference, Dr Tynney said he did not think there would be a third World War. For a long time, though, he said, there would probably be a "period of peaceful co-existence" which would be "uncomfortable and anxious."

He said complete and final peace would depend upon a new concept in which nationalism is forgotten and human relations are regarded on a global basis.

China-Russia Split Likely Over Manchuria

New York, Nov. 22.

Russia and Communist China may split over Manchuria, the British historian, Dr Arnold Toynbee, said last night. Dr Toynbee spoke at a Public Affairs Institute conducted yesterday and today at Lake Forest College in Chicago. He spoke on "World Unity and World History."

At a news conference, Dr Tynney said he did not think there would be a third World War.

For a long time, though, he said, there would probably be a "period of peaceful co-existence" which would be "uncomfortable and anxious."

ONLY FEW ITEMS

Britain had wanted to embargo only a small number of items having an indirect military importance, Mr Stassen said. The United States wanted continued restrictions on many items which, though useful in peace-time, would be largely or exclusively devoted to war production itself.

But throughout the negotiations the United States Government had favoured increased East-West trade to build Western Europe's economies and defence.

He summed up the Paris agreement by saying: "At summer's end United States officials could look back upon the results of the international revision effort not with complete satisfaction, for the United States did not achieve all it desired, but with the consciousness that this country's security efforts had been substantially met."

EFFECTIVE CONTROL

The advantages of the Paris agreement were that a more effective control system had been developed for the most important war potential goods and greater opportunities had been provided for an expansion of general trade with the Soviet bloc in Europe—an expansion which could have a bearing on the development of peaceful East-West relations.

Perhaps the most far-reaching result of all had been that the unity and voluntary co-operation of the 18 countries involved had emerged intact, Mr Stassen said.
